Eliot and Fiona
Post are twins
caught up in an epic
custody battle between their mother's and father's families. Their mother is the immortal

goddess Atropos, the eldest Fate,
and their father is Lucifer, Lord
of the infernals, a diabolical
fallen angel.
The families
have put them through

rigorous, life-
threatening
challenges,
and together
they've risen
to combat
them in amazing
ways. But now they are facing the greatest trial
of all—high school.
Paxington Unviersity is no normal high school—it's a place where gods and goddesses, warriors and soccerers learn to harness their power, where a debate in class can end in a duel, and your classmates aren't simply friends or enemies, but allies in battle or threats to your life. To flunk is to die—only the toughest graduate. As Fiona and Eliot struggle to keep up their grades by surviving the rigorous training, both families are watching. High school is bad enough, but imagine being caught in the midst of an immortal/infernal war... At the Publisher's request, this title is being sold without Digital Rights Management Software (DRM) applied.

 A GUARDIAN, ECONOMIST AND PROSPECT BOOK OF THE YEAR 'A superb book' Simon Sebag Montefiore 'An empowering story of human ingenuity' Economist 'Full of curious facts' The Times Causes of death have changed irrevocably across time. In the course of a few centuries we have gone from a world where disease or violence were likely to strike anyone at any age, and where famine could be just one bad harvest away, to one where in many countries excess food is more of a problem than a lack of it. Why have the reasons we die changed so much? How is it that a century ago people died mainly from infectious disease, while today the leading causes of death in industrialised nations are heart disease and stroke? And what do changing causes of death reveal about how previous generations have lived? University of Manchester Professor Andrew Doig provides an eye-opening portrait of death throughout history, looking at particular causes – from infectious disease to genetic disease, violence to diet – who they affected, and the people who made it possible to overcome them. Along the way we hear about the long and torturous story of the discovery of vitamin C and its role in preventing scurvy; the Irish immigrant who opened the first washhouse for the poor of Liverpool, and in so doing educated the public on the importance of cleanliness in combating disease; and the Church of England curate who, finding his new church equipped with a telephone, started the Samaritans to assist those in emotional distress. This Mortal Coil is a thrilling story of growing medical knowledge and social organisation, of achievement and, looking to the future, of promise.

"Hamlet's
"mortal coil" -
which eventually and inevitably we
"shuffle off"
when we enter the sleep of death, as he puts it - has never been static. Indeed

how the human body and its component parts have been understood, individually and collectively, has shifted across time, shaped by culture, religion, and technology. In this probing and provocative new book, Fay Bound Alberti uses the global histories of medicine, pathology, and emotions to explore these changing notions. Each chapter uses a different focus - bones, skin, sexual organs, spine, tongue, heart - revealing how each body part connects to a peculiarly Western notion of expertise, one which appropriates one element from the others and ignores their interconnection. The themes examined in This Mortal Coil - the nature of identity, the relationship between the brain and the heart, and the gendering of our physical and emotional selves - are enduring ones, but perceptions of the "perfect body" or "perfect health" evolve constantly. Moving between the surface and what lies beneath, Alberti provides a rich and fascinating accounting of each part, shedding light on the role scientific developments - from medical care to plastic surgery to cloning - plays in how we look at ourselves. Written with insight and narrative verve, Alberti's provocative book reveals how the mortal coil can be unwound, and looked at as if for the first time"-- Mortal Coils New England Publishing Associates Unlike some other reproductions of classic texts (1) We have not used OCR(Optical Character Recognition), as this leads to bad quality books with introduced typos. that asks some of today's most inimitable musicians which song they would choose to be the last one they ever hear. If you could choose the last song you'd hear before you died, what would it be and why? Your favorite song of all time? Perhaps the one you danced to at your wedding? The song from that time you got super stoned and just let the chords speak to you? It's a hard question that Mike Ayers has thought about for years. In One Last Song, Ayers invites 30 musicians to consider what song they would each want to accompany them to those pearly white gates. Weaving together their explanations with evocative illustrations and poignant interludes—what your song to die to says about you, what songs famous people have died to, and more. The book offers insight into the minds of famous artists and provides an entry point for considering how integral music is to our own personal narratives. "Is that what you are here for? To restore balance?" Astra raised his brows to the question, the answer seeming simple enough. "He-the Nothing Man-threatens that balance. Someone has to set it right." But he couldn't do it alone. From his perch at the edge of his floating cloud kingdom, fledgling weather god Astra watches as a mysterious figure known only as the Nothing Man flaunts his power on a village below. He returns to his castle to consult his advisor, best buddy and crotchety old sprite, Reinbert, about undertaking the skybound tradition of pilgrimage in order to find a way to stop this man-made-god. Turned away at his jilted ex lover's temple, they are joined by a little wood nymph and a mysterious former minion of the Nothing Man himself. Together they begin the continent-wide trek for information and ammunition,
