A New York Times Bestseller! An Instant Indie Bestseller! A dark, twisty modern fairytale where three sisters discover they are not exactly all that they seem and evil things really do go bump in the night. Iris Hollow and her two older sisters are unquestionably strange. Ever since they disappeared on a suburban street in Scotland as children only to return a month later with no memory of what happened to them, odd, eerie occurrences seem to follow in their wake. And they're changing. First, their dark hair turned white. Then, their blue eyes slowly turned black. They have insatiable appetites yet never gain weight. People find them disturbingly intoxicating, unbearably beautiful, and inexplicably dangerous. But now, ten years later, seventeen-year-old Iris Hollow is doing all she can to fit in and graduate high school on time--something her two famously glamorous globe-trotting older sisters, Grey and Vivi, never managed to do. But when Grey goes missing without a trace, leaving behind bizarre clues as to what might have happened, Iris and Vivi are left to trace her last few days. They aren't the only ones looking for her though. As they brush against the supernatural they realize that the story they've been told about their past is unraveling and the world that returned them seemingly unharmed ten years ago, might just be calling them home.

What does handwriting mean to you? Do you see it as the manifestation of an ancient craft or as a modern-day stylistic feature? Or perhaps a common matter that everyone develops? Is it something that must be accepted as unchangeable or is it perceived as an ability that many fail to master? Currently, the word handwriting has been more or less limited to mean the style of writing that is unique to each person. When handwriting had a greater practical importance, before the invention of the typewriter, schools often engaged in handwriting teaching. Scales were developed in elementary schools to gauge the consistency of the script from grade to grade and several meticulous assessments of one's handwriting were made. Studies have shown that when writing, the pressure exerted by the penholder (grip pressure) as well as the pressure placed by the tip of the pen on the paper (point pressure) varies constantly. Moreover, it has been determined that one's writing speed is not constant but rather depends on the type of stroke that is being produced. For example, when one begins to write, the speed of writing generally increases progressively, coming to a height toward the middle of this action, and slowing down toward the end. The orientation of the stroke, its complexity, and previous form will change the pace of the writing process in question. Speed is often determined by the length of the elements of a letter or character, as it typically takes more time to draw long strokes in comparison to short ones. Researchers have observed that these two types vary in handwriting location, speed, and the style of motions in the fingers and hands by comparing the handwriting motions of those with good and bad handwriting. An important association between the changes in speed and the shape of letters was noticed and those with good handwriting demonstrated greater uniformity in terms of the pace in which they formed their strokes. This is a handwriting workbook for teens so that they can improve their handwriting, thereby empowering them to express themselves confidently and creatively through the written word.

Precious cargo... P.I. Nico Scalia was hardly prepared for his newest client—eight-year-old Krystal Harper. At first he thought she was playing a practical joke; then he realized this little girl was serious. She wanted to hire him—as a bodyguard for her mom. When Nico actually met Dana Harper, the thought of protecting her twenty-four hours a day was tempting. Trouble was, Dana was hell-bent on caring for herself, so Nico had to convince her she needed him. After all, there was no way the stubborn prosecuting attorney could secure herself and her daughter from the reality that someone close to her heart wanted her dead.

Back in 1973 Johnny Carson made a joke about a toilet paper shortage. The next morning many of his 20 million viewers rushed out to their local supermarkets and cleared the shelves of toilet paper. And of course we all know about Oprah's legendary power to turn obscure books into overnight best sellers and unknown people into media stars. Talk show hosts like Johnny Carson and Oprah inspire almost religious fervor in their audiences. Television is indeed a powerful medium. As the novel opens, Krystal is the hottest talk show host on TV. She has it all—fame, a successful clothing and perfume line, a best-selling book, and Chandler Davis, a good-looking ex-soap hunk, for a manager and lover. But Krystal's empire is beginning to show cracks in the foundation. Her product sales are beginning to slip, a serious competitor has arrived on the scene, and her Nielsen ratings are in free-fall. Then, literally, a miracle saves her career. A blind woman's sight is restored on the show and suddenly the "miracle" is being discussed on everything from Good Morning America and 20/20 to countless blogs. Krystal is back on top. But is it a miracle, a medical anomaly, or a hoax? Everyone wants to know: does Krystal have the power to restore sight to the blind? Toss into the mix Reece Kagan, Krystal's sleazy, unscrupulous producer and a man who is obsessed with keeping the show on top at any cost, and the Reverend Darius, a conman, scripture-spouting Brooklyn storefront minister who specializes in miracles on demand—and you have Network, a black satire novel which examines two of our most influential institutions in America today: religion and television.

John Green meets Rainbow Rowell in this irresistible story of first love, broken hearts, and the golden seams that put them back together again. Henry Page has never been in love. He fancies himself a hopeless romantic, but the slo-mo, heart palpitating, can't-eat-can't-sleep kind of love that he's been hoping for just hasn't been in the cards for him—at least not yet. Instead, he's been happy to focus on his grades, on getting into a semi-decent college and finally becoming editor of his school newspaper. Then Grace Town walks into his first period class on the third Tuesday of senior year and he knows everything's about to change. Grace isn't who Henry pictured as his dream girl—she walks with a cane, wears oversized boys' clothes, and rarely seems to shower. But when Grace and Henry are both chosen to edit the school paper, he quickly finds himself falling for her. It's obvious there's something broken about Grace, but it seems to make her even more beautiful to Henry, and he wants nothing more than to help her put the pieces back together again. And yet, this isn't your average story of boy meets girl. Krystal Sutherland's brilliant debut is equal parts wit and heartbreak, a potent reminder of the bittersweet bliss that is first love.

In the time of Freud, the typical psychoanalytic patient was afflicted with neurotic disorders; however, the modern-day psychotherapy patient often suffers instead from a variety of addictive disorders. As the treatment of neurotic disorders based on unconscious conflicts cannot be applied to treatment of addictive disorders, psychoanalysis has been unable to keep pace with the changes in the type of patient seeking help. To address the shift and respond to contemporary patients' needs, Ulman and Paul present a thorough discussion of addiction that studies and analyzes treatment options. Their honest and unique work provides new ideas that will help gain access to the fantasy worlds of addicted patients. The Self Psychology of Addiction and Its Treatment emphasizes clinical approaches in the treatment of challenging narcissistic patients struggling with the five major forms of addiction. Ulman and Paul focus on six specific case studies that are illustrative of the five forms of addiction. They use the representative subjects to develop a self psychological model that helps to answer the pertinent questions regarding the origins and pathway of addiction. This comprehensive book links addiction and trauma in an original manner that creates a greater understanding of addiction and its foundations than any clinical or theoretical model to date.

Krystal Le Beau's true mate just showed up at the ranch on professional business. Sheriff business, to be exact. Not only is he a bossy cop, he's also a cat. As a wolf shifter, what's she supposed to do with a feline mate? Don't even get her started on how her mother will react. At Luperca's suggestion, Doug Dansby came to Earth to find his lost companion. The one female who matches his soul and will complete him. It has taken five long years of living on a strange planet and acclimating to the culture, but he has finally found her. And no one, not even her mother, will take her away from him. As if mating issues aren't enough, Luperca wants Krystal to use her abilities to see auras and speak with spirit guides to find soulmates for the other men of the Sirius and Pleiades star systems. It's a daunting task, but with a lot of help, she'll figure out how to make it work. Now she needs a way for the off-world visitors to come and go from Earth, as well as, someone to test her system before she offers it to the world. Krystal's biggest secret is about to become public knowledge. She's a psychic matchmaker of the most unusual kind. She is matching off-world men to earth woman. That's right, extra-terrestrials are coming to claim earth woman. Ugh, that sounds like the title of a bad B movie.

This compilation includes Volume 1 through Volume 3 of the world famous (by now!) "Krystal - the Teaching Assistant" series! When I first joined "Happy Giraffe School" in the year of 2017 as a "part time English teacher", little did I know what was "waiting for me", hehe. When I first walked into class to teach English (a job as I have said before MANY times that I do NOT enjoy) - - and saw the gorgeous (Madam) Krystal sitting at the back of the class, coolly staring at me without a care in the world, I had NO idea what was "lying in store" for the "unwary" Watson! And I certainly was naive enough to think that I could ask her to ... actually do her job ... !!! Not to mention the other teachers as well, hehe. She took me in hand from DAY ONE - and my adventures in that regard? Well, all detailed beneath! This series proceeds, as did the Empress Cody and Sophia Bai series to different levels of humiliation and degradation - - not to mention, and most importantly, mental conditioning of the most extreme kind - - which I've written about extensively in the past of course. True femdom is always about the mind, my friend - and on that note - - talk to her SOLES, boy! Not her! Hehe ... Thank you, Madam Krystal - 'twas indeed a great honor!! (and no better moment than when the school "finally let me go" so I could focus on my full time task - - serving YOU!)

She has no second chance with him. Anne lost Robert five years ago when she said no to his proposal, and there's no going back now. Even though rejecting him was the hardest thing she's ever done. Even though she's never gotten over him. Even though he's moving right upstairs. He's back for at least a month, recovering from an injury before he returns to the Navy. And he hasn't forgotten or forgiven the way she chose her career over him. But there's no sense in trying to work through their raw feelings--in or out of the bedroom--because if they get close to each other again, the same painful parting might happen a second time. But getting close to Robert is exactly what Anne can't stop doing. Pemberley House is a series of modern reimaginings of Jane Austen novels, and the books are set in a historic mansion in Virginia that has been converted into condos. Loved None But You is loosely inspired by Persuasion.

Can a newborn infant accurately record traumatic experience? Can early traumas be retained in memory? How would such traumatic memories affect later development? Where should we look for evidence of such traumas in adult patients? If Someone Speaks, It Gets Lighter provides surprising answers to these questions. Taking as her point of departure both her own clinical experience and case reports in the analytic literature, Lynda Share provides a thorough, at times revelatory, examination of the basic issues. She proposes that the controversy between narrative and historical truth be redefined in terms of the distinctly different memory systems involved and in terms of the special mechanisms whereby trauma, as opposed to ordinary expectable experience, becomes a major unconscious organizer of behavior and memory. Then, winding her way skillfully through contemporary debates about the limits of reconstruction, she argues persuasively that the impact of early infantile trauma can become accessible through disciplined analytic inquiry. Indeed, for Share, to forego the possibility of reconstructing such traumas in favor of an exclusively here-and-now interpretive approach is to risk perpetuating the trauma in all its pathogenicity. By contrast, when trauma can be reexperienced meaningfully in treatment, both behavioral reenactments and trauma-related transference issues can be dramatically clarified. Demonstrating her point with vivid clinical case reports, Share emphasizes the special value of dream interpretation in recovering the full psychological impact of events that occurred in the first few years of life. Through the imagistic dimension of dream formation, unconscious traumatic memories gain access to an expressive vehicle through which the patient, aided by the analyst's understanding, can begin to work through early experiences that have heretofore been dimly known but not felt.
